The HIV/AIDS pandemic is the worst public health crisis in history. There are over 40 million people who are living with HIV/AIDS. Life expectancy in some countries has fallen from 65 years to less than 35. HIV/AIDS is a global disease that touches each of us in Chicago and in every country around the world. While the statistics and scope of the pandemic can seem overwhelming, there is hope. And there are ways in which each of us can get involved and take action. This workshop will bring together resource persons from both local and global organizations who are currently providing humanitarian services, health care, economic opportunities, education and access to credit to help strengthen communities and provide access to care for those in need. They will share examples of successful health interventions and promote our engagement to further their impact..
