Global Leaders Luncheon

"Reinventing America's Economic Future: Fostering Industries of the 21st Century"

featuring

Paul S. Otellini
President and Chief Executive Officer
Intel Corporation

In his remarks Paul Otellini will describe the need to create a culture of investment in the United States, including the role for American businesses to partner with the government in promoting education, innovation and the creation of new business opportunities in order to maintain a globally competitive economy.

Since joining Intel in 1974, Paul S. Otellini has managed several Intel businesses, including the company's PC and server microprocessor division and the global sales and marketing organization. In 2002, Mr. Otellini was elected to Intel's board of directors and promoted to president and chief operating officer. He was named CEO in May 2005, a role in which he's focused on driving the company's growth and mission to deliver innovative, energy-efficient products. Under Mr. Otellini's guidance, Intel also aims to usher in a new era when portable wireless computing is available anytime, anywhere. The company also is focused on bringing the next billion people online with affordable computers tailored to their needs.
