

Activist Training on Population and the Environment

Do you wonder how sustainable development works both at home and abroad? How population growth, women's health, and the environment affect one another? How you can stay engaged after the election?

Join the Izaak Walton League, National Audubon and the Sierra Club for a skills building workshop. Hear from experts on international population, health and environment issues. Learn about the global and local connections for sustainability and receive skills training on how YOU can make a difference post-election. The event is FREE and RSVP is requested.

This is a great way to network, build friendships and gain experience on issues concerning the environment. We will be covering local and regional topics as well as some international perspectives.

The workshop will be held in Chicago on Saturday November 1 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum, 2430 N. Cannon Drive, Chicago IL. The event is FREE! Lunch will be provided.

To RSVP for the event, please contact Tara Scibelli at 301.548.0150 x255 or tscibelli@iwla.org.
